

Alex Sinclair

Alex Sinclair is a thinker, researcher and practitioner in the field of Israel education. He is a lecturer in Jewish Education at the Schechter Institute of Jewish Studies, Jerusalem, a researcher at Makom - the Israel Engagement Network of the Jewish Agency, Jerusalem, and an adjunct assistant professor of Jewish education at The Jewish Theological Seminary.

At JTS, Dr. Sinclair teaches online courses, and runs the annual Visions and Voices of Israel Seminar. He is also a Tanakh Education Consultant for the Melton-AVI CHAI Jewish Day School Standards and Benchmarks project. Between 2001 and 2007, he was a full time member of the JTS faculty.

Dr. Sinclair grew up in London, England, and was active for many years on both a lay and professional level in the Masorti Movement there. He did his undergraduate work in Classics and then Hebrew Studies at Balliol College, Oxford, and then a Ph.D. in Jewish Education at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

He has published articles in scholarly journals and in more popular formats, and has taught and facilitated teacher education in day school, camp and synagogue school settings.

Dr. Sinclair lives in Modi'in, Israel.
